GERMAN CAPTORS IN TURN SEIZED

When They Became Confused and Led American Prisoners Right Back Into Allies' Lines.

London, June 10.—How the captors of three American soldiers on the sector northwest of Chateau Thierry unwittingly led them back into the allied lines owing to the condition of the fighting front there is told by the corporal of The Times with the American army in France.

Corporal Sidney W. Rogers and Privates Raymond Howard and Frank P.
Ridway were captured at hill 204. Two Germans started with them to the rear but became confused and walked straight into the French lines and themselves were taken prisoner. The Americans reported that German officers had questioned them closely as to when and where they had landed in Europe, where they were trained and the identity of their units. The Americans refused to answer any questions. The Germans served the American prisoners with a nauseating compound of flour and water as food.

When You Neglect Your Teeth.

An author tells in the May American Magazine how neglect of his teeth nearly ruined his life. He says:
"A woman came to my dentist while I was being treated. She suffered from neuralgia. There were no cavities in her teeth apparently, and she had been examined by various physicians, none of whom could locate the cause of her trouble. I saw the dentist take an X-ray of her teeth on the side of her face where the pain occurred, and watched him develop it. There, as plain as day, lying across the roots of three of her teeth was a fourth tooth that had never come through. It was a bad job removing that tooth, but the woman has had no trouble since."

"A man in an office near mine suffered for years with his eyes. He had been treated by a first-class specialist, but instead of everything his eyes would become terribly inflamed once or twice a year. Finally, as a last resort, the doctor, sent him to a dentist. The X-ray showed that four of his teeth were causing all the trouble. They were to all appearances perfectly sound, and he hated to lose them. But he has had no eye trouble since they came out."

"Les Darcy, the Australian prize ring champion, came to this country as a perfect physical specimen. A few months after his arrival he had an attack of rheumatism. He was taken to a hospital, examined, and it was found that every tooth in his mouth was decayed.
He died two weeks later."
